INTRODUCTION.

The provenance of the tablets here published, when it is given in the Catalogue (see page 43 ff), is based upon the names of places which are mentioned in the documents where they were dated. Nos. 2 to 28, which do not contain any reference to the city in which they were written, are said to have been found at Senkereh, the ancient Larsa, or biblical Ellasar, in Southern Babylonia. The texts, however, do not offer any evidence in corroboration of this statement. The fact that two of them refer (Nos. 21:2 and 23:2) to transactions in connection with "property of Nanâ," points to Warka or Bismaya as the probable place of their discovery.

The texts belong to the first millennium B. C., with the exception of Nos. 1 and 1A, which are dated in the reign of Nebuchadrezzar I. (c. 1155-1140 B. C.). That they do not belong to the reign of the biblical Nebuchadrezzar (see Nos. 43 to 53), but to the earlier king bearing the same name, is determined from palæographic considerations. They are the only transactions dated in this reign which have thus far been published. The same is true of Nos. 2 and 3, which are dated in the reign of Nabû-shum-ishkun; of Nos. 4 to 21, in that of Nabû-nâsir; of No. 22, of Nabû-mukîn-zêr;<sup>1</sup> and of No. 29 which belongs to the reign of Bêl-ibni, the king of Babylon who ruled during the reign of Sennacherib. These rulers are mentioned in the dynastic lists and other historical inscriptions, but records written in their interests, or documents dated in their reigns are unknown among those that have been published. The three contracts dated in the reign of Esarhaddon, Nos. 30, 31, and 32, are the first published documents from Babylonia, belonging to this reign. If the king's name in No. 42, which is only partially preserved, is to be restored Sin-š[um-lîshir], it is the second tablet known belonging to this reign, the other being in the

Metropolitan Museum of Art. It may be possible, however, that the name is to be restored, Sin-š[ar-ishkun].

Text No. 3 shows that the number of years which Nabû-shum-ishkun reigned, must be increased at least to thirteen. The full number of years that Nabû-nâsir reigned according to the King's List, is represented in these texts, namely fourteen. If the identification of Nabû-mukîn-zêr of text No. 22, with the so-called Ukîn-zêr (χίραρος of the Ptolemaic Canon) is correct (see below), a year must be added to the number in his reign that is given in the King's List and the Babylonian Chronicle, which say that he ruled three years.

The latest dated tablet hitherto published of the reign of the so-called Šamaš-šum-ukîn, belonged to his fifteenth year.<sup>1</sup> Text No. 38 was dated in the twentieth year, fourth month, and fifteenth day. This is generally regarded as the last year of his reign. From considerations which follow it seems that the name of this ruler, as well as that of the so-called Ukîn-zêr, should be read otherwise.

There is no justification for the reading Ukîn-zêr for DU-zêr. The name is abbreviated and presupposes the name of a deity as an additional element. While it is possible that this element was the third, like U-šur-a-mat-Ea, such formations are rare; and, moreover, none have been found compounded with a form from the verb kânu, to which ukîn belongs. The formation is doubtless the common one, namely, deity + verb + substantive. As I have shown in Babylonian Expedition, Vol. XV., p. 9, the verbal form in the middle of such formations with exceedingly few exceptions, is the participle; e. g., Ea-mu-kin-šum, etc. It should, moreover, be stated that Nabû-mukîn-zêr of our texts (No. 22) is probably the full name of the ruler. There is a small gap in the King's List prior to the time of Nabû-shum-ishkun into which this king might ultimately be placed, but at the present it seems highly probable that this ruler is to be identified with Mukîn-zêr. The tablet has the same general appearance as the others which are said to have come from Senkereh, with which it was purchased, and which belong to this period. If this identification is correct, then the king ruled at least four years, three months, and twenty-six days, instead of three years as given in the King's List, and the Chronicle.

The name of the brother of Ashurbanipal who sat on the throne of Babylon, which is written GIŠ-ŠIR-šum-ukîn, and GIŠ-NU-šum-ukîn, is read Šamaš-šum-ukîn, by reason of the fact that the Ptolemaic Canon gives as the corresponding name Σαασδυχνος, and also because in a certain bilingual text (Rawlinson V, 44:50), Šamaš(<sup>d</sup>UD) is given as the Semitic equivalent for the Sumerian GIŠ-ŠIR.<sup>1</sup> Strong reasons, however, speak against the reading “Šamaš” for GIŠ-ŠIR or GIŠ-NU, the variant writings of the deity, in this name.

In the first place in the several hundred occurrences of the name in question, the first element which is always written GIŠ-ŠIR or GIŠ-NU, in not a single instance, as has been noted before, do we find a variant written UD. And on the other hand, in the hundreds of personal names compounded with the name Šamaš(<sup>d</sup>UD), in not a single instance is a variant found in which these characters are used.<sup>2</sup> On the other hand, in the same texts containing the name of our ruler, are found names compounded with UD=Šamaš, for example see No. 37:10, where the scribe wrote his own name with UD, and the king's name in the usual way. There is a large number of such instances in the texts mentioning the ruler's name. The only explanation that could be offered, if GIŠ-ŠIR and GIŠ-NU in this name are to be read Šamaš, would be either to explain that the scribes in the various cities throughout Assyria and Babylonia had agreed to write the name of the famous sun-deity in this particular personal name, in this peculiar way;<sup>3</sup> or we must recognize some other reading.

The name of the temple of the moon-god at Urû was E-giš-šir-gal, written with the same signs, GIŠ-ŠIR, GIŠ-NU, and KIŠ-NU. The reading of the signs in question in this temple name is definitely determined to be kiššir or giššir;<sup>4</sup> and until other evidence is forthcoming this seems to be the proper reading also for the characters in the name of this ruler. We must admit that Giššir-šum-ukîn is not quite as close to Σαασδυχνος of the Ptolemaic Canon as is Šamaš-šum-ukîn, especially owing to the fact that Σαως is the known equivalent of the name Šamaš, still in view of some of the other Greek

equivalents of Babylonian and Assyrian names in the Ptolemaic Canon, which are very poor reproductions of the originals, and especially in view of the fact that  $\delta\nu$  does not represent very closely šum, the middle element of the name, it is possible to understand that the first element is also poorly preserved in the Greek.

Of peculiar interest for the late period of Babylonian history are the two documents Nos. 98, and 88, dated in the reign of Antiochus III. in the 122nd, and 125th years of the Seleucidan era (i. e., 190 and 187 B. C.). One contains nine seal impressions (un-qa), and the other twenty-four (abnu DUB), nearly all of which are oval. Seal impressions similar in size are found on the business documents of the Murashu Sons of Nippur, where in some instances it is specified that they were made with gold or copper seals (unqu ħurašu, unqu siparru). Whether a stone was set in a gold or bronze ring, or the entire seals were made of these metals is not stated, but in most instances the seals were stone.

But of special interest is the fact that No. 98, which is dated at Erech, 190 B. C., indicates that the worship of Anu seems to have predominated up to this very late period in that city. Several names are compounded with Nanâ, the chief goddess of Erech, but no less than fifteen names, not counting persons that have the same name, are found compounded with the deity Anu, whose worship had been introduced into that city at a very early period by the Semites who came from the Northwest<sup>1</sup>. In other words, there are more names of persons compounded with Anu in this tablet than are found in the thousands of Neo-Babylonian contracts from which Tallqvist gathered his name list. It must be regarded as a most significant fact that the worship of Anu should have prevailed in this city so conspicuously up to the very latest period of Babylonian history.

The contents of most of the tablets are given in the Catalogue, p. 43 ff. It will be noticed that more than two-thirds of the documents are personal contracts: land titles, rentals of houses, sales of slaves, promissory notes, mortgages, assignment of obligations, agreements on oath to perform certain duties, etc. The first twenty-eight, as well as other texts, belong to the class known as "Temple Administrative <sup>1</sup>In addition to the proofs given in my Amurru the Home of the Northern Semites, p. 142 ff., that Anu is a Semitic deity, cf. the Syriac name for Bethany, namely  $\text{בֵּית עֲנַי}$ . See also the connections in which Anu and Antu are found in the inscription published by Winckler, OLZ, 1910, col 296; and the scribe's name A-nu-wa-an-za, MDOG, 35, p. 28.

Archives." These contain principally payments to individuals in the temple service; or are receipts for expenditures made in the interests of the temple. The chief value of these texts from the early period is of a palæographical character, because they are the first published documents of the age they represent. They are also valuable because of the foreign names contained in them,<sup>1</sup> which show that the proportion of foreigners in the service of this particular temple, in this age, was larger than those bearing Babylonian names. At the present it is difficult to appreciate fully the source of this foreign infusion beyond the fact that quite a number of the names are West Semitic, i. e., Amorite and Aramaean.

As the purpose of the series is mainly to place the texts of the Library in the hands of scholars, the translation of selected texts is reserved for publication elsewhere in another series.
